Penalty Taxes

WASHINGTON—(AP)—As Democratic members arranged to consult with President Roosevelt Tuesday night on the tax bill, the senate finance committee Tuesday afternoon agreed definitely to tighten up provisions of the existing law for penalty taxes on corporations "improperly accumulating surpluses."

Dispute Flood Bill

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The house disagreed Tuesday to senate changes in the $398,000,000 omnibus control bill and sent it to conference for reconciling.

Favorable Action On Coal

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A possibility of favorable action by the house ways and means committee Tuesday on the new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill was projected by Representative Sam Hill, Democrat, after a two hour closed session on the substitute measure for the Guffey act which was declared invalid by the Supreme Court.

Votes For Labor Committee

CLEVELAND.—(AP)—The Socialist national convention voted Tuesday to establish a permanent national labor committee "whose duty it will be to co-ordinate the action of Socialists within the trade union in order to carry out the policy of the party."

The vote came after warnings from trade union delegates that it would drive members from the party.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The senate finance subcommittee agreed unanimously Tuesday to recommend against including the proposed tax of one half cent on sugar in the new tax bill.

Coroner Reports Youth Drowned

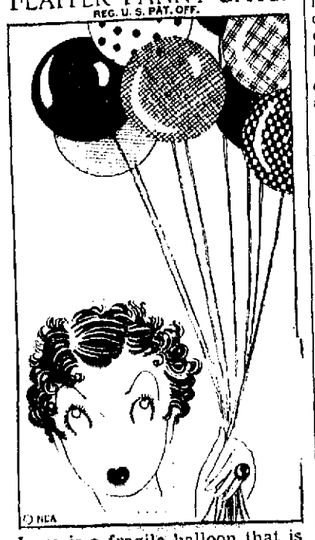

Verdict of Accidental Drowning in Death of Cloe Shackleford

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—County Coroner Glenn Riggs returned a verdict of accidental drowning late Monday in the death of Cloe Shackleford, 22, whose body was found Monday morning in the West Fork branch of the White river near Brentwood, the youth's home.

The body was discovered by a searching party after Shackleford failed to return Sunday night from a fishing trip. He had left Sunday morning.

Fishing reel, lunch and his pipe were found on a bank nearby.

Old Fort and Dooley's Ferry Photographed for Centennial

Deep in the green woods on the Spring Hill-Dooley's Ferry road is a high grassy mound, encircled by a deep moat and a rifle trench—all that is left of a Confederate fort which more than 70 years ago defended the approach to the Red River crossing.

But old as the fort is, the Dooley's Ferry crossing is still older.

Historian Fay Hempstead tells us that on June 29, 1831, Colonel Benjamin R. Milam, of Lost Prairie, Miller county, navigated a steamboat, "The Alps," to a new point far up the river.

It was this Colonel Milam who, when Davey Crockett came through Little Rock November 12, 1835, on his way to the Texas wars, joined him along with many others—and perished at the siege of the Alamo.

In those days the road to Dooley's Ferry was a broad highway—and it was still a major crossing during the War Between the States. And that is why this grass-covered fort came to be built—although the casual traveler today passes it by.

But The Star last Sunday included both the fort and its trenches and the Dooley's Ferry locale, in its picture record for the Centennial Edition June 26.

The newspaper, with former Mayor R. A. (Ruff) Boyett as a guide, made eight Graflex photographs. Three of these will be made into a frontispiece for one of the historical sections of the big edition.

2 Pension Leaders Defy House Probers

Two Others Under Subpoena Ignore Call to Be Questioned

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Dr. F. E. Townsend's defiant attitude toward the house investigating committee was emulated Tuesday by two of his old age pension leaders who failed to appear when they were called for questioning.

Chairman Bell called for John Keiffer of Chicago and the Rev. Clinton Wunder of New York, when he opened Tuesday's hearing. Neither answered. Both were under subpoena.

Tax on Liquor at Newport Is Invalid

Supreme Court Holds It Conflicts With State Control Law

LITTLE ROCK.—An ordinance passed by the City Council of Newport levying an occupation tax of $3,500 a year on wholesale liquor dealers and $2,000 a year or retail dealers is invalid because it conflicts with the state liquor control law, the Arkansas Supreme Court held Monday in affirming a decree of Jackson Chancery Court.

The City Council first passed an ordinance, levying occupation taxes of $350 and $200 a year against wholesale and retail liquor dealers, respectively, and in December, 1935, amended the ordinance to increase the tax to $3,500 and $2,000.

Edgar Price, a retail liquor store operator, brought suit to enjoin Mayor H. O. Walker and other city officers from enforcing the ordinance. The Chancery Court found in favor of the plaintiff and the city officials appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that municipalities have no power to levy an occupation tax on the liquor business.

The Thorn liquor act provides that cities of the first class and counties may levy a license fee on liquor dealers, but in neither case can the fee exceed half the amount of the state liquor license.

Cities of the second class, to which class Newport belongs, and incorporated towns were not given authority to collect any kind of tax from liquor dealers, the county having been given authority to levy the tax in such towns and in territory outside cities of the first class.

Little Rock Residents Talk Over Old Times

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Two of Little Rock's most prominent citizens met Monday, shook hands and reminisced a bit. They had not talked together since 1911.

One of the two—Chief of Police J. A. Pitcock—said of the other:

"I've seen him at a distance on one or two occasions, but I haven't had a chance to actually speak to him. In fact, I haven't even seen him since he was elected governor four years ago."

Governor J. M. Futrell grinned and replied:

"Jim, you haven't changed a bit in 20 years."

G-Man Is Flayed by Parole Group

Association Charges That Hoover Released Unfair Statements

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—(AP)—The National Probation Association called upon President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings Monday to stop J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, from issuing statements "destructive to the advancement of probation and parole."

The association, meeting with the National Conference of Social Work, adopted a resolution which said Hoover "has in a number of recent addresses indicated lack of knowledge of the purposes, methods an daccomplishments of the probation and parole" and has used "unfair and misleading statements which have tended to retard development of these important agencies for crime control."

(Hoover has criticized freeing of some criminals under parole or on probation and has said every agent of his department killed on duty was shot by a paroled criminal.)

Felon Is Captured in Arkansas River

Little Rock Man Swims and Overtakes Fleeing Prisoner

DARDANEELE, Ark.—Plunging into the treacherous Arkansas river in pursuit of an escaped prisoner who was trying to swim his way to liberty, Lawrence Frank Ewing, Little Rock, captured his man in midstream here late Monday afternoon and held him until officers in a boat, came to his assistance.

Dozens of Dardanelle citizens stood on the river bank and witnessed one of the most thrilling spectacles they ever had seen.

The recaptured prisoner was Dan Taylor of Dardanelle, a paroled convict. Officers charged that Taylor violated his parole by getting drunk here Saturday night and had jailed him pending his return to the state penitentiary.

Art Johnson, of Guthrie, Okla., who has served several penitentiary sentences escaped at the same time as Taylor but he also was recaptured quickly.

Taking advantage of the confusion caused by Johnson's break for liberty, Taylor leaped from a second-story window of the jail, dashed to the river bank and struck out for the north shore.

Ewing and his wife were hitch-hiking their way back to Little Rock and had stopped near the jail. As Taylor ran for the river, Ewing followed, plunged in and swam rapidly after him. He overtook the fugitive about half-way across and held him. Meantime Deputy Sheriff Campbell and W. J. Clement, deputy county clerk, had secured a boat and started in pursuit. They pulled both fugitive and pursuer into the boat and returned them to the Dardanelle shore. Taylor was exhausted when the officers reached him but Ewing appeared untired.

Special Session Called to Decide Smith's Candidacy

Comptroller's Eligibility to Be Question by Committee

SESSION SATURDAY

May Reduce Democratic Delegates to National Convention

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Chairman J. D. Head of the State Democratic Central Committee Tuesday afternoon issued a call for a special session of the committee to consider the eligibility of State Comptroller Griffin Smith as a candidate for Chief Justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Other business of the special session will be to act on excess delegates recently elected to the Democratic national convention.

The committee was called to meet in Little Rock at 10 a. m. Saturday, June 6.

The chairman's call listed as the business to be taken up was only a matter of Smith's candidacy and excess delegates.

He made no mention to the possibility of a preferential primary.

Mr. Head said that he believed that a recent canvass of the committee had developed that the committee was against such a decision.

Group Fails to Agree on Unity

Presbyterians Not to Unite With Other Branches of Church

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — Southern Presbyterians failed to agree Monday night on proposals to unite with other branches of the church.

Spirited debate, followed a report of the Foreign Relations Committee urging the matter be passed by without action.

A committee of five was appointed to seek a sasis of action by the assembly, possibly Tuesday.

Dr. T. S. Smylie of St. Louis urged the appointment of a new committee to make overtures to other bodies seeking unity.

"There is a great need for unity among those who hold a like confession," he said, "we should do everything possible to smooth out differences until all Presbyterian bodies are fused into a common unit."

Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden of New Orleans said he would ask appointment of a committee to seek a basis of unity. This group would report to the 1937 assembly in Montreat, N. C. They would not confer with other branches.

Elderly Minister Disapproves

Vigorous opposition to union with the Northern branch was voiced by Dr. B. F. Bedinger, 81, of Red Springs, N. C., who said:

"Everytime they (the Northern church) say they want to unite, it means 'we'll swallow you up or nothing'."

Dr. Edward Mack of Richmond, Va., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, read the group's report, offered after four Presbyteries had asked for union with the Northern and reformed branches of the denomination.

"We believe no further answer is now necessary than to suggest that the assembly continue the present committee on union with other Presbyterian bodies," the report said.

Father and Son Held for Highway Fatalities

TEXARKANA, Tex.—(AP)—Burt McKee and his father, S. C. McKee, were placed in the Bowie county jail at Boston, Texas, Monday on charges of negligent homicide in connection with an automobile accident Saturday in which two negroes were killed, and four white men injured.

The men were unable to make bond of $2,500 and $1,000 respectively.

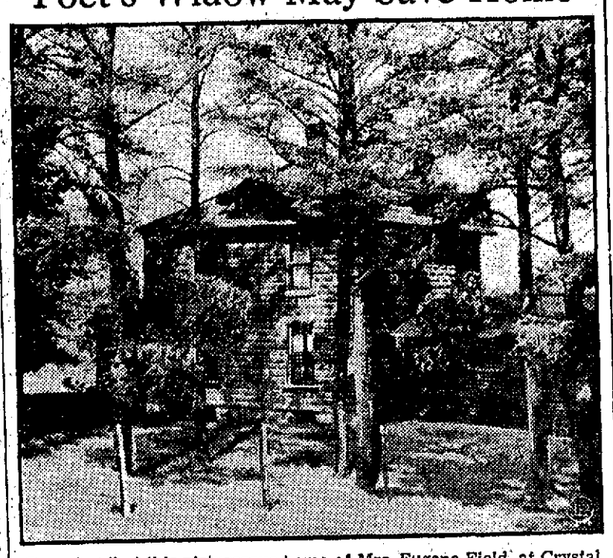

John Sloan, Queen City negro, died two hours after the accident and Lou Johnson, negro, also of Queen City, died Sunday.

An automobile occupied by the McKees is alleged to have collided with a truck in which six persons, including the negroes, were riding, seven miles southwest of Texarkana.

Fewer than one-fifth of all ships sailing under the British flag are more than 20 years old.

The year 1928 was the second largest in the history of foreign financing in the United States.

Poet's Widow May Save Home

Learning that this picturesque home of Mrs. Eugene Field, at Crystal Lake, near Heafford Junction, Wis., was to be sold under a mortgage foreclosure judgment, fraternity brothers of the beloved children's poet rallied to the aid of his 80-year-old widow with an offer of $3000 to satisfy the judgment. Mrs. Field, who, with Eugene II, her son, has developed the home and 155-acre estate since its purchase in 1921, is seriously ill from heart attacks. Eugene Field, Sr., died in 1895.

Says Framed by Publicity Seekers

Congressman Zioncheck Returns to U. S. From Honeymoon Cruise

NEW YORK —(AP)— Representative Marin Zioncheck and his 21-year-old bride returned on the liner Scanpenn late Monday from their turbulent three-weeks' honeymoon cruise in the Caribbean bringing with them a new three-speed bicycle.

The Washington congressman said he expected to do a lot of his traveling on the bicycle in the future to avoid being arrested for speeding.

He said all his previous arrests for speeding, except the first arrest at Alexandria, Va., were "framed" by local authorities so they could get some publicity.

"The bicycle won't do faster than 25 miles an hour," he added. "That ought to get by."

Zioncheck said he is always being "bothered by people," a circumstance which he said has caused all his difficulties since he resisted arrest in Washington, D. C., when he was hailed into court for spteding.

"I'm not going to be a sucker for publicity seekers all my life," he said. "I want to get along with people and I don't want them to capitalize upon me."

Kidnap Charges to Be Heard Wednesday

EL DORADO, Ark.—(AP)—Hearing for Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mitchell, on charges of kidnaping 14-year-old Polly Peace, a neighbor's child who left home a wek ago, will be heard Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell were returned here by Sheriff Grady Woolley, from Athens, Texas, where they were taken into custody at the request of local authorities.

Sheriff Woolley said the girl, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Peace, living near a place formerly occupied by the Mitchells, left home on May 16 and that he learned the Mitchells and the girl were at Athens. He said the couple had at first opposed extradition but later consented to return to Arkansas to answer the charges.

The Mitchells said here that the child wanted to go with them. She is back at home with her parents today.

The remainder of the consumers here will have the Ozark mountain water available within a day or so.

Lovers Quarrel, Shooting Results

Woodrow White, 22, Sent to Hospital With Gunshot Wounds

JONESBORO.—Woodrow White, 22, of near Alicia is receiving treatment in the hospital here for gunshot wounds which he says were inflicted by Nona Young, 20, as the climax to a lovers' quarrel at the home of Miss Young late Sunday.

White said that the girl fired at him with a 12-gauge shotgun from a distance of eight feet when he started into the yard at her home.

A large hole was torn in his knee and the flesh between his knee and hip was peppered.

He said that he had quarreled with Miss Young but that he did not consider the affair as serious. When he returned to her home later with a friend, Ancil House, he said that the young woman was standing on the porch with the gun in her hands and ordered him to stay out.

White said he believed that she was joking and started toward her when she shot him.

Advises Students to Remain in State

Babson Says Opportunities Greater in Arkansas Than in Cities

CONWAY — Students graduating from Arkansas State Teachers College and Hendrix college were advised Monday afternoon by Roger W. Babson, world famous statistician, to remain in Arkansas where opportunities were greater and perils not so great as in the populous centers along the coasts of the United States. Approximately 3,000 persons heard the commencement address on the campus at Hendrix. The program started about 30 minutes late, due, it was said to Mr. Babson's insistence that the car in which he was riding from Couchwood, near Hot Springs, to Conway, not be driven over 40 miles an hour.

Mr. Babson who spent Sunday at Couchwood the guest of H. C. Couch returned there after the program Monday night.

He departed from his prepared address with the statement that since he had been in Arkansas he had heard the life story of Mr. Couch and considered that story so remarkable that he told it instead of the story of his own life.

In another departure from his prepared speech he said that 100 years ago the center of population of the United States was in a central county in New York state and that now it was in the vicinity of Peru, Ind.

A line drawn south and west from the old center and the new would pass through Hot Springs, Ark., he said, in point out that Arkansas might in years to come be the center of population of this country.

Changes Planned in Army Command

Five New Major Generals to Be Created as Others Retire

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A reshaffling of the army's high command—resulting chiefly from retirement of major generals reaching the age limit of service—will create five new major generals, eleven new brigadier generals, and a dozen changes in assignments before the end of the year.

The first shift will place Major General Charles E. Kilbourne, now commanding the second division at San Antonio, Texas, in command of the 6th corps area at Chicago succeeding Major General Johnson Hagood.

Hagood Is Retired

Hagood, who was sent into military exile for criticizing WPA spending policies, served one day as commanding officer after being restored to active duty and then requested retirement.

Kilbourne recently returned from duty in the Philippines. He previously served as assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans under General Douglas MacArthur.

Others who will retire before the year ends include Major General Frank Parker, who succeded Hagood as commanding general of the 8th corps area at San Antonio; Major General F. C. Bolles, commanding officer of the 7th corps area at Omaha; and Major General Lytle Brown, now on duty in Panama.

New commanding generals for San Antonio and Omaha are expected to be selected from among the major generals not already assigned to command corps area.

The five new major generals to be named are to be selected from among the top-flight of brigadier generals.

Hundreds of Fire Fighters Battle Flames on Three Fronts

WORST FIRE IN YEARS

Officials Probe Plane Crash That Resulted in Six Deaths

NEW GRETNA, N. Y.—(AP)—Seventeen or more men were missing Tuesday as the worst fire in years rolled across the South Jersey costal plains, leaving a toll of five known dead and miles of blackened woodland.

Hundreds of weary fire fighters, volunteers and CCC workers battled the rolling surf of flames along a wide triangular front stretching from New Gretna to Chatsworth and thence to Manahwakin.

Six Reported Dead

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Six men were reported missing and probably were drown Tuesday after the steam trawler Picador sank three minutes after colliding with a tanker off San Salvador in the North Sea.

Probe Plane Crash

AMOS, Quebec.—(AP)—The Canadian passenger plane crash in which six men died drew official investigators Tuesday to the fastnesses of Northern Quebec which kept the disaster a secret for two days.

Circumstances of the crash, which became known only late Monday night after the plane plunged to earth last Sunday, were still enveloped in mystery.

Recent Bombings Blamed on Legion

Evidence Uncovered by Authorities in Five River Homes

DETROIT, Mich. —(AP)— Enlarging their drive against the Black Legion, hooded vigilante order, Wayne county authorities Tuesday raided five homes in the downtown river district here and found what they claimed was evidence of two recent bombings in which they said was inspired by the black robed band.

Coincident with the raids, came a statement from V. F. Effinger, of Lima, Ohio, who had been sought for questioning, that the Black Legion had more than 6,000,000 members—but that it had no intention of trying to take over the government.

Investigate 7 Deaths

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—Political implications of the hooded and robed Black Legion came into the foreground with the assertion by Harry Colburn, chief investigator for the Wayne county (Detroit) prosecutor's office that members told him the ultimate aim was a United States dictatorship.

Colburn previously had disclosed claims of members that there were 135,000 Black Legionnaires in Michigan alone, all pledged to possess arms, and all organized along military lines.

Colburn said members told him that the organization was perfected for the purpose of establishing a dictatorship "when the time is ripe," under the national leader who, he said lives near the Ohio-West Virginia border.

Submits to Questioning

Arthur F. Lupp, Highland Park, Mich., milk inspector whose name was found in correspondence concerning the order, according to Owen Dudley, Jackson (Mich.) county prosecutor, submitted to questioning late Monday at police headquarters.

Lupp said the Black Legion made its greatest growth during the depression.

"It is made up of people in all walks of life, who were brought to their senses when Communism and other isms crept into the United States from foreign countries," he said.

Asked about reports of floggings and other acts of terrorism ascribed to the organization, he replied, "I can't discuss the ritual."

Deaths in Detroit Probed

Colburn said he was investigating seven deaths in Detroit to ascertain if there was any connection with the Black Legion.

One, he said, was that of George Marchuk, described by police at the time as a radical sympathizer, of suburban Lincoln Park. He was found dead of a bullet wound on December 22, 1933, and his death was recorded as a suicide.

Thirteen were arraigned here on charges of kidnaping and murder in the "ritual execution" of Charles A. Poole, whose death in a lonely roadside ditch brought into light the existence of the blood-banded fraternity.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

One of the essential factors involved in nursing a baby is to see that he is neither overfed nor underfed. Of the two, however, underfeeding is the more difficult to correct.

One method is to stimulate the breasts by means of a pump. Another is to improve the mother's physical condition. In that event, also, it may be advisable for the mother to be relieved of her child's care except for feeding.

The child may be given some supplementary food. Nursing, however, should be attempted regularly so as to give the breasts the stimulation that comes from the suckling of the baby.

A baby that is getting too much milk will vomit, or regurgitate some of the food. Sometimes he will have colic.

Usually, however, the over-abundance of milk lessens after the first few days. If the milk remains in over-abundant amounts, the milk that the baby takes may be reduced by shortening the time of nursing. The excess supply may be suitably disposed of.

In a few cases, the baby may seem to be overfed due to the fact that there is too much fat in the milk. In this case, the doctor may direct the addition of water to the diet before nursing.

There are, however, few cases in which breast milk is unsuitable for digestion. If a mother has been eating garlic, the milk may have a bad taste. It is also possible that a bad taste may come to the milk from drug substances.

There are various ways of finding out how much milk a baby is getting. He may be weighed before and after feeding. This should be done at each nursing, until the mother knows how much milk the baby is getting regularly from the breasts.

If the mother is unable to weigh the baby regularly, she may tell something from the way in which the child nurses. If a baby is very hungry, he will nurse hungrily and with considerable "pulling power." If there is plenty of milk, the baby will seldom nurse more than five or six minutes.

If, however, the milk supply is insufficient, he will nurse for a half hour or more, and when he stops he does so because he is exhausted rather than because he has had enough milk.

If a baby is getting no milk at all or exceedingly small amounts, he will try to nurse vigorously for a few minutes and then stop.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

The grand sweepstakes of spring is here. Only mother gets the sweeps and father doesn't get his steaks.

Every year the house has to have its setting-up exercises, especially after a long winter like the past one, to carry it along for another year.

This is the time I feel sorry for the kids. Oh, no, not because they have to eat snacks and sleep in odd corners, but because of the warnings. Mother isn't going to have her new wallpaper marked, or the brand clean rug spotted. Fresh curtains are "verboten" to small grimy hands, too. As for the furniture and floors gleaming with fresh polish, angels help the careless if toys make any scratches.

Percentage Is Against Parent

Outside, father has not been idle either. He has sought solace in his garden. Rows of string mark the spot where precious seed lie. Little envelopes on sticks are "stop" signs beyond which toes must not venture. The dog is tied up and everybody on probation. What a time!

Now, of course, mama knows very well that one of the new chair covers is going to have chocolate smeared on it. The law of averages says so. Or the second step from the bottom look ashamed of the chewing gum trampled into its new velvet coat.

Papa, too, can place a safe bet on what Polly taking too great an interest in his radishes and delving into earth's mysteries with the mixing spoon. He needn't have a stroke over it, either, for he knew before he began that an average number of accidents would occur and all the red lights he could hang out couldn't keep all the jinxes away.

After Pride Wears Off

Once in a while it all works out fine and furnishings escape at least until the first flush of mother's pride wears off. Then a dab here or a spot there ceases to be vital. When dad reaches the stage where he makes a sour face at the hose and declares the whole grasspatch can dry up for all he cares, a tomato more or less won't matter.

But in the meantime, woe to him who forgets.

The moral is this. Parents are a good bit that way. When they are glowing under a new interest, their children had better watch out. Johnny, permittted to jump on the old covers, may forget they are new. Orders are orders, but custom sets his pace.

A great deal of blood pressure would be kept down if we could remember the law of averages and resign ourselves to a small, bitter dish of ruin in the punch of housekeeping.

The enormity of a child's crime depends largely on the state of mind, at the moment, of his parent.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

John Erskine demonstrated that an amusing novel can be written by any writer brash enough to lay hands on classical legends and dress them up in ultra-modern attire.

Noel Langley uses this formula in the writing of "Cage Me a Peacock" (Morrow: $2.50), and produces a novel which is flip, gay and irreverent. That its flipness and gaiety are more than a little forced is unfortunate, but we can't have everything.

Mr. Langley builds his story around the legend of the rape of Lucrece, that proud and haughty Roman matron who was despoiled by the head of the reigning house of Tarquin, in consequence of which the Tarquins were booted out of Rome and a Liberty League version of a republic was set up.

For the grandeur that was Rome Mr. Langley has scant respect. His Lucrece is a giddy young female who begins her career as model to a disreputable old sculptor, learns about life from a young shepherd boy, marries impulsively and bigamously, and is, all in all, not a bit better than she should be.

And [illegible] her path he brings a succession of Roman soldiers, senators, spoilsmen, fixers and financiers who, far from having the classical lineaments of antique legend, resemble nothing so much as a group of funmakers at the annual convention of one of the bawdier American fraternal orders.

The book is, to repeat, flip and gay—determinedly so. It provides fair entertainment and might have provided more if Mr. Langley hadn't ben trying a little too hard.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—Being a movie star leaves one open to many a scheme to garner easy money. The same publicity designed to raise an actor's esteem among the populace also increases his eligibility for the sucker lists of racketeers, extortionists, and others of the gyp-gentry.

Hollywood, in fact, is the last frontier fo rthese questionable characters. They see gold in them thar Beverly Hills, and they're out here in such numbers that experienced actors involuntarily duck every time they're accosted by strangers.

The chiselers could be driven out of Hollywood easily enough, but the actors shy from the possibility of going to court for the purpose, and afterward seeing their names in print. It's bad publicity.

So the gkpping goes on—and the stars pay. They pay the racketeers. They pay the shyster lawyers who prey on both actors and gyp experts. And they pay the managers, lawyers, and strongarm stooges whom they gather about them for protection.

Bumps Still Pay

The most common racket, of course, is that of staging "accidents," with an actor's car the butt of the occasion. Tom Mix brought the malpractice into full bloom. His was quite an automobile, a cross practically between a circus wagon and a soda fountain on wheels. His name, in large bright letters, easily identified it.

And so antiquated flivvers bore down on Tom Mix from all directions, knocking off their own bumpers and fenders, carefully loosened in advance.

When the owners claimed damage, Mix usually paid. It was cheaper than going to court.

Many stars used to attend the Friday night fights in their own cars. They don't any more. What stopped them was the habit of some clever tricksters of staging falls before the wheels of the actors' cars, and collecting "damages."

McLaglen Calls Bluffs

One actor the accident artists can't get is Victor McLaglen. He has told them, time and again, to sue and be damned. And most forget their grievances right away.

Nine cases, involving a total of $250,000 in claims, actually got into court, but he licked every one of them. It cost him $10,000 in lawyers' fees, but he figures he got away cheaply, at that.

George Raft has gone to court three times because of his reputation of being willing to fight at the drop of the slightest uncomplimentary remark. But the "Raft-baiters" never collected. He had plenty of witnesses to prove the assaults were amply justified.

Old Tricks in New Dress

The time-worn badger game, in modern trimmings, has flowered anew among the actors. A famous actor, married to an equally famous young actress, was overheard asking where he might find a certain book. An extra girl heard him and told him he might have her copy, if he stopped at her apartment for it.

He did and got the book. But he also got the surprise of his life when the extra, who had met him in her flimsiest negligee, said, "Maybe you'd better leave a check for $1000. My husband is downstairs with four witnesses." He paid.

There are many varieties of this deception, and a new one is being tried almost weekly. The actors have to be on their toes to guard against being trapped. It's quite a nerve-racking business.

Kola Sharpe Wins Ninth of Season

Little Rock Hurler Defeats Nashville, Breaking Vol Win Streak

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—More than 8,000 baseball fans Monday night saw Little Rock crush the Vols, 9 to 4, snapping Nashville's winning streak at five straight victories behind the effective hurling of Kola Sharpe. It was his ninth win of the season.

The Peb pitcher limited the Vols to four hits and no runs for eight innings, easing up in the final frame when the loser threatened to come to life with their well-known powerhous attack.

Chicks Whip Leaders

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP)—The Memphis Chicks snapped a 2-all tie in the seventh Monday with a batting barrage that sent in eight runs, and added two more in the eighth and ninth to conquer Atlanta's Crickers, 12 to 7. The Chicks combined a bunt, four bases on balls, a delayed double steal a brace of Cracker miscues and four singles to produce the seventh inning rally.

The GLAMOROUS ADVENTURE

by Jean Seivwright © 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, winner of the John S. Larne costume design prize, comes to New York to find work. Gail's parents are both dead. She has spent the past three years at MISS CRANSTON'S fashionable school for girls—due to Miss Cranston's generosity and friendship for Gail's mother.

Armed with a letter from Larne, Gail goes to his office and is told he is out of town. DEREK HARGREAVES, an artist, overhears this conversation and offers to help Gail. He advises her to go to MADAME LIZETTE'S shop to apply for a job.

Gail arrives there just after temperamental Madame Lizette has learned her designer has gone to Hollywood. Gail gets the job and goes to work next morning. On the way to the shop after lunch she encounters DICK SEARLES whose sistery, ROSEMARY, was Gail's roommate at school. The Searles' are very wealthy. Dick tries to make a date with Gail, but she postponed it.

Back at the shop, Madame Lizette sends for some sketches Gail has made.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

DEJECTEDLY Gail flung herself on her bed when she entered her room. How quickly her rosy dreams had been shattered!

Now she thought bitterly of those dreams. Why had Madame deliberately declared she wanted designs suitable for older women, when Gail's instructions had been to prepare youthful models?

Perhaps Madame had resented the fact that Gail had returned late after lunch; though, if she had looked at the time cards, she would have seen that Gail had not been gone even an hour. Then her thoughts flew to Dick. She liked him. He was a good companion. Never having had a brother of her own, Gail had looked upon him as one ever since Rosemary had invited her to spend a summer vacation at their home the year Gail's father had died.

Of course they were older now. Gail was 19 and Dick was 23—going into his father's office in the fall. Well, the girl who married him would have a good time, and never a single worry about making ends meet.

Gail rose from the bed. Things hadn't come quite to such a stage with her that she would grasp the first chance to seek security—marry a man whom she did not love. Then she laughed softly. She knew suddenly what was wrong. She was hungry!

Pulling off her frock, she opened her wardrobe trunk (she hadn't unpacked it, for the future still seemed rather uncertain) and selected a lovely green dress of featherweight wool. Then, as she started to run the water for her bath, the telephone tinkled insistently.

Gail hastened to pick up the receiver. It must be Dick—but as she answered the call a sudden thrill of happiness rose in her heart. Derek's voice came over the wire.

"Tonight," she repeated, and her eyes were shining . . . "to celebrate. . . . But I don't know yet if I've made good! Madame . . . all right . . . in half an hour . . . yes . . . delighted," and she replaced the receiver gently in its cradle.

Lucille turned to Derek, "Isn't this the famous artist, Derek Hargreaves?" she asked.

SHE danced across to the bathroom. Derek Hargreaves was coming to take her to dinner. She was in and out of the bathtub in almost no time at all. She brushed her red-gold curls till every solitary hair seemed like a thread of burnished gold. She outlined the delicate curve of her lips with a rosy lipstick, dusted her cheeks with powder, and touched the pink lobes of her dainty ears with a delicate, fragrant perfume. Then she slipped into her clothes and perched a smart little hat on her sunny hair.

Again the telephone tinkled to inform her that Derek was downstairs. Picking up her handbag, Gail walked along the corridor to the elevator, trying to still the ecstatic beating of her heart.

There was admiration in Derek's blue eyes as he took Gail's outstretched hand. "Well, here you are!" he said. "Once more let me offer my congratulations."

"But I told you I didn't know if they were in order. Madame acted so queerly today I don't know what my fate may be tomorrow!"

"Oh, I don't think you need to worry. Besides, we can always have another celebration if need be. Any special place where you'd like to dine?"

"No. I haven't lived in New York since I was a youngster, so every place is new."

"Well, I think you'll like the place I have in mind. It's in the Village, and if you're interested in seeing some of the celebrities about town as well as some of the Park Avenue set we'll go to Ivan's."

"That sounds intriguing."

"The food's very good—lots of Russian dishes. And now, let's take a taxi. You see, I don't have a car."

"Why not the subway?" asked Gail, who had already learned the various modes of transportation in New York. "It's quick—"

"And cheap," added Derek. "But that doesn't count tonight because I've just had a check for an illustration I did months ago. I'd quite forgotten it. The firm went broke and the advertising agent refused to pay until he knew what was coming to him . . . so you see we're celebrating on 'Found Money'!"

* * *

IN spite of Derek's remonstrances—for he felt a taxi was a necessity, not a luxury according to the present state of his finances—they went downtown in the subway, walking the short block to Ivan's.

The three rooms in the basement of the old brownstone house were crowded, but Derek and Gail were seated at a small table in the glassed-in room which had been added at the rear.

Gail looked around eagerly, her bright eyes noting the precisely trimmed orange trees in their green wooden stands, the rough, hand-woven linen tablecloths and the peasant ware on the tables.

"What a gorgeous place!" she exclaimed softly.

"I thought it might appeal to you. It's very popular just now. Do you like the music?"

"I love it, and the costumes of the orchestra—typically moujik, aren't they?"

"Yes, but they say the leader and one or two of the others are really members of the old Russian nobility."

"Oh, how interesting! Have you ever spoken to them?"

"No! I've said 'Hello' occasionally when the leader has passed my table at close range. Well, how about ordering dinner now?" Derek offered her one of the menus that the waiter had placed on the table.

* * *

QUICKLY Gail glanced at the list before her. Then, raising her sunny head—for she had taken off her small green hat—she said, "Won't you please order for me? There isn't a thing in the world I can't eat, for you see I knocked around with Dad so much when I was a kid I learned to eat everything."

"Well, that's easy. How about a nice steak and vegetables and then some Russian dessert, with all the fixings—salad, coffee, and so on?"

"Lovely!" exclaimed Gail, and once more her eyes roved around the room. What a lot of interesting looking people! Would she ever belong with them, she wondered. Then, looking across at Derek, she realized that he was gazing intently at her.

"Aren't you going to tell me about your skirmish with Madame?" he asked, his eyes twinkling.

"Oh, but that sounds so paltry in a crowd like this. I don't want to bore you."

"Nothing you say will ever bore me," Derek answered.

Immediately she told him about her work at Madame's, quickly skipping over the real reason she had been late at noon.

The waiter brought the food and hovered about with becoming solicitude while Derek and Gail exchanged many a confidence.

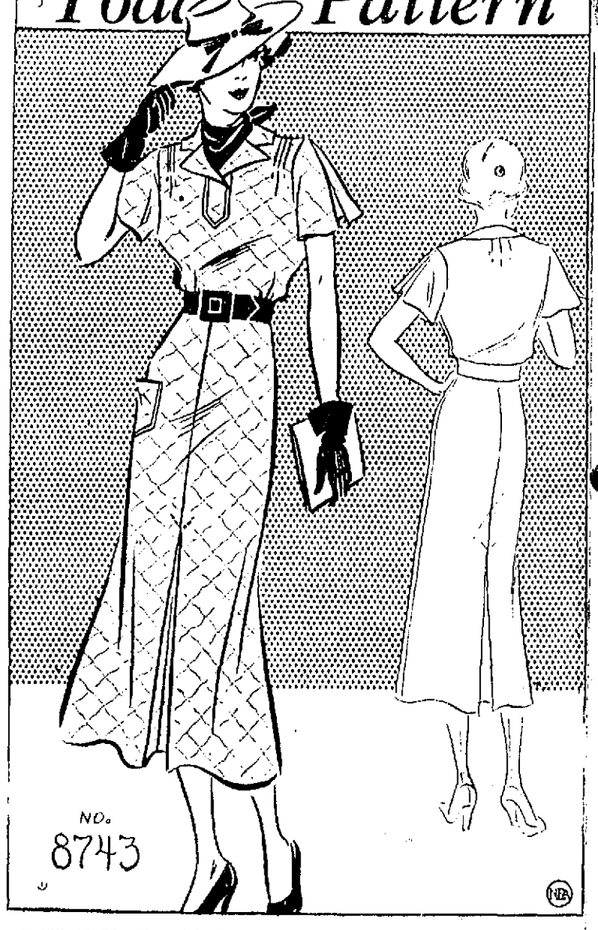

"So your mother's home was in Arizona?" Derek remarked, lighting a cigaret. "I've always wanted to go there and paint."

"I've never been there, although Dad and I covered lots of the states, but it's New York for me now!" Gail stopped abruptly. Were her eyes deceiving her or was that really Lucille Travers coming to their table, gorgeously gowned as usual to accentuate her brunet beauty.

"Hello, Gail," Lucille exclaimed in honeyed tones. Then, turning to Derek, she said, "Isn't this the famous artist, Derek Hargreaves? Won't you come and join us at our table?"

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Welshimer

I wonder how George Picker felt, the other day, when a commissioner of welfare in the state of New York filed suit against Mr. Picker's estranged wife, Sadie, charging her with non-support. I wonder what his reaction was when Justice Jacob Panken, of the Domestic Relations Court, ruled that Mrs. Picker had to take care of her husband, at least to the extent of paying him the $5.75 a week he received from relief funds.

Maybe he felt relieved. Or resentful. Or chagrined. Perhaps he was too tired to feel anything much. Mr. Picker has been trying, without success, to get a job. Lately his finances have been so low that he has been on relief. His wife, though, has money and property. Now she has to share it with her husband.

The economic merry-go-round on which we have been tossed hither and yon for the last several years has created some strange and turbulent situations. Judge Panken's decree, which is an unprecedented one in New York state, has ample justification. Judge Panken said: "Responsibility for maintaining a family is the husband's but whenever it becomes a matter of whether the wife of means or the state cares for a dependent husband, the responsibility rests on the wife."

Reversing the Traditional Situation

Custom has established the premise that a man shall support his wife. When that man quits on the job, due to laziness or shelfishness, letting a woman both mend and buy his socks, he is rated as a social cad. This stigma is ape to be miscarried into situations in which a husband, through no fault of his own, is dependent on a woman. In such cases she needs to administer sympathy and kindness quite as much as she needs to divide her money.

For so long women have prated of equlity between the sexes. Now Judge Panken establishes the equality in matters which contain a financial responsibility. It a man is required to assume the support of an estranged wife, who is dependent, the situation in reversal shouldn't be so startling.

After all, men are compelled to assume the financial support of able-bodied women, from whom they are separated, who sometimes do not need the allowance, or could support themselves. If woman's responsibility should be extended to assist a man under such circumstances, she could object. I doubt if she could muster the patience that men have shown in a multitude of such cases.

While Fortune Hunters Escape Criticism

Certainly the difficulty in the Pickers' menage comes in the fact that the two people are no longer carrying keys to the same front door. They are separated. If they still loved each other and lived together the matter of support would be a mutual one, and there would be no need for a magistrate of the law to ask Mrs. Picker to supply her husband with shirts and poached eggs.

After all, two people who have taken each other for better or for worse are prepared to weather martial storms together. Two people who have come to a crossroads and said goodbye can't enjoy either giving or receiving aid form each other.

It must be worse for Mrs. Picker than for Mr. Picker. She a fat pocketbook. She asks nothing from him. He has been compelled, at the instigation of the law, to ask a livelihood from her. Certainly his manhood must be outraged, if he has the semblance of manhood in him, which he must have since he has looked diligently for employment.

Yet there are those who will condemn Mr. Picker and never offer a criticism of titled sons from old, far lands who put a price tag on their love. Not Judge Panken, though. When he referred to fortune hunters he named them outright: Count Doni de Catellane, who married Anna Gould; Consuelo Vanderbilt's Duke of Barlborough, and those three well-mannered young men known as the marrying Mdivanis. They were invited to the best homes while Mr. Picker, who is entirely in favor of earning his own living, is a victim of mismanaged love on the dole.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

THE "International Order of Royal Exiles" has added to its circle another member, Haile Selassie, Emperor of Ethiopia, who recently fled Addis Ababa, leaving the capital to marauding natives. Italian troops had pushed back the great Negus, who boasts direct descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, until he reported to the safety of foreign soil.

Haile Selassie had been Emperor of Ethiopia since his brilliant coronation in 1930. He was born in 1891, and became regent, with Empress Zauditu, in 1916. As emperor, he assumed the awesome title of "Elect of God, King of Kings, Conquering Lion of Judah, and Light of the World." He is well educated and, during his reign, introduced many social and economic reforms.

But he could not build an army of primitive tribesmen, despite their fearlessness and courage, that could face Italian invaders.

Poison Victim Says Suicide Is Forced

Note Says Robbers Forced Him to Swallow Fatal Dose

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—The story that he was forced by robbers to swallow a fatal potion of poison, related in a note found near the body of Lannie Wright Stewart, filling station owner and former minister, was investigated Monday night by officials to determine whether his death was due to murder or suicide.

Lying face downward on a cot on which he slept in his station, the body of Stewart, 47, was found this morning by an oil truck driver, when he went to deliver an order of gasoline. His empty pocketbook lay on the floor and the note was n a desk.

Message Charges Rbbery

"Two young men," the note said, "knocked on the door and said they wanted some gasoline for their car. When I opened the door, they hit me and pushed me back in bed, and one held a pistol to my head and the other one made me take several swallows of some drug that burned my throat. I feel like I am dying.

"They wore shaded glasses and gloves and said all they wanted was my money and I would wake up O. K.," the note added. It was address to "Dear mother and children."

R. L. Tarkington, investigator of the district attorney general's office, said the little office bore no signs of a struggle and there were no marks of violence on Stewart's body.

The vital organs were turned over to Dr. V. L. Fuqua, state chemist, for an examination.

Drouth in South Threatens Damage

Georgia, Virginia and Carolinas Are Among Principal Sufferers

ATLANTA—(AP)—Sun-parched crops and fields needed immediate rains in several Southern states Monday to avert losses threatened by weeks of dry weather.

Georgia, Virginia, the Carolinas and Tennessee were among the principal sufferers with conditions also acute in northeastern Alabama. Scattered rains had relieved the situation in most other sections.

The drouth was affecting not only growing crops but also delayed plowing and planting in many areas. Replanting of some crops was necessary.

Virginia faced a 35 to 50 per cent loss in farm produce grown in the tidewater area. Cabbages, beets and potatoes were the principal crops suffering fro mthe drouth.

General crop conditions in Georgia were described by the United States Weather Bureau as "worse than a week ago" with three-fourths of the state dusty and dry. Scattered showers moistened the coastal areas. A delayed watermelon crop was expected by growers. The state's important peach crop is already moving to market.

Alabama was seriously dry until heavy local showers brought a 10 percent improvement in crops over most of the state. Northern and eastern counties missed the rains and conditions there were acute.

The dry weather came too late to affect truck crops in Florida to any extent although citrus suffered slight harm. Scattered rains of the past few days improved conditions.

A. B. Marmon, district agricultural agent for the University of Tennessee at Nashville, said all crops in the state needed rain. Tobacco was classed as the principal sufferer. Early hay was damaged and gardens generally were affected.

Cotton growth in northern and central Louisiana was reported exceptionally good. Mississippi also had favorable cton weather.

Hayride That Ended in Hey-hey

It's been generations since Fifth Avenue saw such carryings on as the hayride in which younger members of the New York social set participated. Industry Reveals Recovery Signals

Markets Are Steady With Revival of Business Over Nation

NEW YORK—(AP)—Improvement in some departments of trade and industry and unmistakable signs of stability in others provided financial observers with a solid platform from which to scan the new week.

While hopes were qualified in most quarters by questions incident to taxes federal spending and the quiet simmering of political and economic unrest aboard concensus was that recent business gains would themselves generate additional power for the upward drive.

In numerous respects the past week's progress bore the stamp of capital goods as railroads and the construction industry proved aggressive buyers of equipment and heavy steels.

Purchasing Power

Although automobile makers shifted into lower gear, sources close to the trade said the outlook for increased purchasing pwer carried an unofficial guarantee of good sales shead.

In aptricular, they emphasized marked gains in farm cash income from normal sources over last year and the opinion that a sizable chunk of the soldier's bonus money would find its way into the new car market.

Electric power, carloadings, retail and wholesale trade, all well ahead of a year ago, afforded additional encouragement to Wall street.

Earnings gains and favorable dividend actions in turn made bright reading.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 shares, the stock market declined .1 of a point to 60.7 on the smallest volume since July, 1935.

Girls Tortured, Witness Reports

Vice Ring Girls of Luciano Are Punished for "Talking"

NEW YORK—Girls caught in the city's vice traffic were subjected to gang torture-burned bodies and feet and slashed tongues—if they talked too much," it was testified Monday before Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook by the sweetheart of one of Charles (Lucky.. Luciano's co-defendants in the compulsory prostitution trial.

The witness, Thelma Jordan, said she had been reluctant to give testimony when first brought before Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey's associates, and then added:

"I know what the combination does to girls who talk. Plenty of girls who talked too much have had their feet burned and their stomachs burned with cigarettes and their tongues cut."

The woman told of threats made to another prostitute while siting in an ante-room of the Dewey investigation office in the Woolworth building, but with these exceptions, only one previous witness among the prostitutes and madams had mentioned the high pressure punishments of the vice combine.

That was Jean Martin, a dowdy madame, who submitted to the syndicate's jurisdiction after being knocked unconscious with a lead pipe.

The witness said that one of the defendants, Ralph Liguori, alleged "stick up" man of the syndicate, threatened Nancy Presser, arrested in the raids of February 1.

"Ralph told Nancy," she said, "that if she knew what was good for her she wouldn't testify against him or any other member of the combination. He said if she ever talked he'd see that she got her picture in her home town paper so her people and friends would see what's become of her.

The witness, who said she was the intimate friend of Benny Spiller, one of the defendants, said that through Spiller she learned that Luciano was the "head man" of the combination.

Socialist Name Thomas Nominee

Veteran Leader Is Named Candidate for Third Straight Time

CLEVELAND.—(AP)—For a third time, Norman Thomas was nominated Monday as the Socialist candidate for president. For vice president, the national convention named George Nelson ,a "dirt farmer" of Polk county, Wisconsin. Both were nominated with little opposition, Nelson unanimously.

Thomas, party nominee in 1928 and 1932, was selected by an overwhelming voice vote.

Against his choice, there was a low cry of "no" from some members of Right wing delegations—evidencing the bitter week-end dispute over the New York controversy, which ended in the seating of the Leftist Thomas delegation and organization of a new Schismatic party by the New York "Old Guard" after its delegation was turned down by the convention.

Consideration of the party platform was deferred until Tuesday.

Nomination of Thomas was made by Dr. Harry W. Laidler, co-director with the nominee of the League for Industrial Democracy—and by Mayor Daniel Webster Hoan of Milwaukee. It was seconded by a dozen or more delegates.

You have plenty of crystal-clear taste-free ice all the time. The White Seal is actually a revelation in refrigeration. See for yourself, by testing it for 10 days, absolutely FREE, in your own home!

Re-icing a White Seal is necessary only every 3 to 7 days! SAF-T-DRAFT keeps temperatures uniformly low, even with a minimum of ice. Do You Know The Answer to This Problem?

Whether you are just trading dollars—that is, if it is taking all you earn to live; or whether you have the problem of stretching a few dollars to meet a multitude of present and future financial requirements. Ask yourself this one question—Am I managing my money wisely?

Perhaps a budget plan will be helpful, or you need a program for systematic accumulation. Or you may find that you can put your idle surplus to work where larger returns are available.
